Moscow, Russia

Moscow Capital Club is located at the Central House of Writers in the west of the city centre. The building itself has been a witness of a change of epochs, generations and rulers since it was built over 130 years ago. It has survived wars, revolutions as well as popular uprisings. Before its existence as a private club, it used to be a venue for balls, coronations and ceremonial dinners. Reagan and Gorbachev held a meeting here during the famous Summit of 1988 in which Gorbachev announced the end of the Cold War.

The Club also has a busy events schedule and continues to welcome high profile industry leaders to take part in panel discussions on relevant topics. This year, the Club also opened its brand-new Billiards room for members to enjoy.
